An American Langtry.
Of the leading lady in the "Galley Slave" company, the Peoria, Ill., "Journal" says: "A Lily has been found on this side of the pond who, for the past two seasons, has gained almost as much notoriety for her beauty as Mrs. Langtry. There was much comment by the audience over the striking resemblance between Miss Majerle Bonner and Langtry. Owing to the striking resemblance of that famous beauty, both in face and figure, she has caused no little sensation, and among photographers she is spoken of as Mrs. Langtry's double and the American Lily." She appears in the "Galley Slave" to-morrow evening as "Cecily Blane."

IS IT SUPERLATIVE CHEEK,
Or a Clever Swindle to Catch the Anxious Patriots of the Granite State?
BANKER, ME, April 17.—Postmasters and other office holders throughout the state are receiving a circular of which the following is a copy:

"BANKER, ME, April 17, 1885.
"DEAR SIR: It is surprising that the national administration do not intend to move with an inconsiderable haste in the matter of appointments to office. Whatever motive, whether partial or otherwise, that may govern the time being, it is evident that it is to be taken for thoughtful consideration. To be in readiness to receive the office of the incumbents desiring to retain their places and who would like to avail themselves of quiet outside service can do so through the agency established with the commendable object of promoting civil service upon business principles, especially when it is clearly manifest that the wants of the community is the better subserved by the present incumbent whose compensation could be no inconsiderable except the limited political influence the possession of such an office might confer.

"We are allied politically with the administration of President Cleveland and propose to receive and consider discreetly and present to the departments at Washington any and all applications confided to us in reference. Get neighbors and friends without distinction of party to recommend a reappointment. Address 'for appointment postmaster-general.' One of the leading features of the agency is direct personal communication with, or a written statement to the appropriate department, having the required supervision attending the matter presented. There are hundreds of cases in and without comprising a single political principle, and where the most factitious partisan can take no exception. Our charges for services are governed by the amount of compensation received by the incumbent, and as will be seen, a moderate commission will cover all the expenses of the applicant.

"The sum required for your office will be $5, and if for any reason we cannot enter upon your proposition, we shall frankly decline and return the sum forward. Reasonable political fidelity is to be expected in this regard and we propose to live up to it. Sometimes, however, party bests common sense, and when this shall be attempted, then manhood to the front. Address all communications to Business Bureau, Bangor, Me."

FENIANS TO MOVE AGAINST CANADA.
Trenton, Pa., April 17.—For some time rumors have been floating regarding an organization of fenians said to be existing in the oil regions, and it is now definitely known that such a body exists, their purpose being to harass the Canadian government and the authorities by the use of powerful explosives. The members of the league are all men who have been in the past known as "mischief-makers" or torpedo men, being engaged in the manufacture of nitro-glycerine and other explosives. A person who is in direct communication with the leading spirits of the organization said that they will combine their forces and attempt to seize the Canadian frontier. It is estimated that two of the points of attack will be the Rideau Canal locks at Jones Falls and the Welland Canal.

will soon again in this broken land.

My father, I can no longer understand.

"Oh, no, I cannot understand."

Why father, dear, whose whole life long has been a life of kindness.

Has been taken from us to join another world.

"Oh, no, I cannot understand."

When his kind control is needed here

Why he should now be lost to a brighter world, where we hope to meet and behold, I do not know.

"Oh, no, I cannot understand."

Since he has joined the loved one gone

before,

Why we are left to mourn our loss,

These aching hearts, how sore

Although I can not understand,

Realize one true thing,

To bear such affliction of this hand

And with my heart will we resign

That God alone is true.

And in our Jesus ever trust.

Realize each day we will resign

That God alone is true.

And in our Jesus ever trust.

Realize each day we will resign

GAMBLING DEBTS VOID.

REMARKABLE SUIT AGAINST THE ESTATE OF A MILLIONAIRE.

Who Dropped $53,000 in an Arkansas Brace Game—Recalling the Hot Springs Gamblers' Fight—The Principals' Testimony Surprises their Friends.

Pittsburg, April 17.—A suit involving $53,000 and interest from February 20, 1882, to date, entered by James E. H. Lane, of Hot Springs, Ark., against the executors of the late James H. Brown, the millionaire coal operator of this city, was put upon trial before Judge Ewing. Brown went to Hot Springs in February, 1882, for his health, and while there lost $53,000 at the game table. He paid the whole amount except $2,000, and for this the suit was instituted. The suit is a remarkable one in many respects, and particularly so because of the presence of Frank Flynn, who was one of the principals in the famous gamblers' fight at Hot Springs two years ago, and D. O. Kyle, of the firm of Watson, Lane & Co., owner of the saloon in which Brown lost his money.

Flynn testified that he had been a gambler, and was fond of gambling, but was forced to abandon the profession because he was no longer able to shuffle cards, owing to an injury to his arm, received in the fight at Hot Springs. He distinctly remembered the visit of James Brown to Hot Springs and his gambling exploits. Brown, he stated, was introduced into the game by D. O. Kyle. Brown lost $53,000 during his stay. The game was what was known as a brace game, at which Brown could not possibly win. Brown was considerably under the influence of liquor, as applied by the house. He lost $14,000 in three sittings—$5,000 at the first, $2,000 at the second and $6,000 at the third. Witnesses were interested in the game to the extent of one third, and he received his share of the first $5,000. His share in the remaining $28,000 he sold to Lane for $500, as he desired to go south, and Lane told him there was going to be trouble over this winning.

D. O. Kyle testified that he was a professional gambler, and in February, 1882, he was interested in the game run by Watson, Lane & Company in the saloon known as Hot Springs. In obedience to Lane's instructions he steered Brown into the game. It was a brace game, at which it was impossible for Brown to win. Brown at the time was under the influence of liquor, and was drinking hard. All the whiskey he wanted to drink was given to him at the expense of the house. Brown's loss during that month was over $53,000. After each sitting Lane would present Brown with a draft, which the latter would sign. That draft was collected through and in the name of a store at Hot Springs. Witness was of the opinion that the transaction did not appear on the books at all.

Oliver Lennon, cashier of the Iron City National bank of this city, testified to Brown having over $53,000 on deposit when he went to Hot Springs, and to the money having been paid out to meet the drafts presented by the Hot Springs bank.

The testimony of Flynn and Kyle caused no little surprise among Lane's friends, who then admitted that the jig was up. To E. J. Smith, a St. Louis attorney, belongs the credit of procuring the testimony, he being employed by the Browns to perform that branch of the work. Upon this testimony and on a deposition made by the chief of police of Hot Springs, the case was rested.

The jury rendered a verdict in favor of the defendants. In charging the jury the judge said it should be remembered that under the laws of Arkansas gambling debts were void.

CARRIED OFF TO ENGLAND.

The Naturalized American Bagpiper: Prisoner in Stirling Castle.

New York, April 17.—Mrs. Mary Ireland wife of Robert Ireland, the bagpiper who was lured to Canada on March 19 and seized as a deserter from the British army, though he had been an American citizen for five years, showed Assistant District attorney Davis a letter from her husband dated April 2, aboard ship at Loch Lowrie, Derry, Ireland. In the letter Ireland writes:

The other two men who deserted from the New City regiment at Halifax are still on board. One deserted fourteen years ago, and the other twelve. Both have wives, but no children, where as I have five children. One of them will be certainly released, as he is far advanced in consumption. I almost envy him. They were entrapped as I was, by promises of good situations. The well man's wife will join him in England, and I will be allowed to keep house with her after his punishment, which he will be light, or else. But a item signed a paper at the instigation of the police inspector that they had voluntarily surrendered themselves. I was not asked to sign such a paper. They were told by the police inspector that the paper would be used in their favor before the court martial in England. We sent the mail before at Derry. We were ordered to keep away from the side while the passengers for different points in Ireland were going ashore in the tender. I missed them their possession of liberty.

In a postscript dated at Liverpool on the 3d last, Ireland writes that he is to be taken to a once, under a strong guard, to Stirling castle for court martial.

"The state department," says Mrs. Ireland in a report, "has forwarded a demand for an explanation in my husband's case, as I am informed to Minister Lowell; but, as my husband's letter shows, Mr. Lowell had done nothing up to April 2. My husband was under a great deal of anxiety when he enlisted and deserted."

New Oil Wells Near Pittsburg.

Pittsburg, April 17.—The residents of Ensworth, seven miles below this city, are excited over another promising oil field. Early last fall a company was organized for sinking a well at the head waters of Lowry Run. Mount Noto, about three miles north of Ensworth, was decided upon as the most promising location. The drills have been a work all winter until within the last few weeks, when the tools struck the well. About a week ago work was resumed at a depth of about 1,500 feet. The tools were drawn when the oil filled the well to a depth of about 500 feet. If this well turns a good producer, it will probably have considerable effect upon the market. It is located in an entirely new territory, and would bring an oil field within ten miles of Pittsburg.

Death of a Life Saver.

Pittsburg, April 17.—Chris Bradford, a famous life saver, died here of paralysis. He was about thirty-two years of age. As a swimmer he was noted for his daring and endurance. In 1875, when Paul Boynton, who had organized a life saving service along the coast, went to Europe, Chris, with his brothers Ned and Mike, took his place and have since been engaged as life savers every season at Atlantic City beach. It is said they have saved at that beach 525 lives.
